VALENTINE'S LOVE

Seriously, Come Try The Cookies

By: Phil Nichols

Valentine's Day approaches. Which heralds many Penn traditions: trying to steal lunch boxes from hapless Tabbard pledges, cleaning up vomit from [any fraternity] pledges, ignoring all of the talk about pledges, and complaining about cliques in Stouffer.

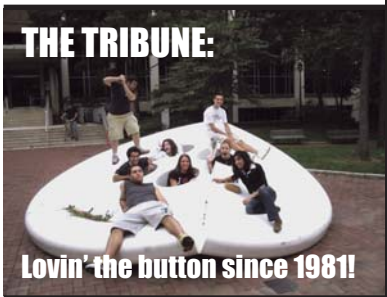

Stouffer has cliques. On the one hand, it is no big deal: any group of people this size has cliques. And a clique should be just a group of friends who like to hang out together, and what is the harm in that? On the other hand, however, being at a University should be about opening yourself up to the new and the unexpected, and not just in the classroom. Sometimes cliques, by making the people in them feel so welcome, make others feel unwelcome and excluded.

At Stouffer, I have found that most people who have lived here have been pretty much happy to meet anybody, and a lot of the exclusiveness of cliques just happens because people do not bother meeting each other or hanging out someplace outside of their comfort zone. Valentine's Day is one of my favorite holidays because I think love is excellent. But meeting people is also pretty amazing. My suggestion for Valentine's Day is to just say hello to someone new. You don't need to buy flowers.

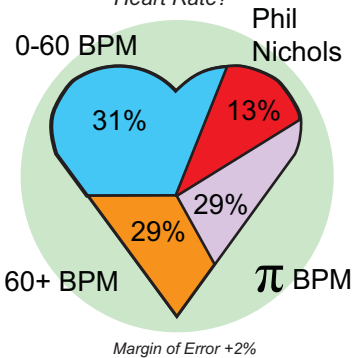

Happy Valentine's Day, and come have some cookies.

Snowboarding on College Green

By: Corey Hulse

Today, I went snowboarding on College Green. There's a small hill right by Van Pelt which lets you get some pretty good speeds before you have to slow down to avoid the pedestrians on the walk. There's also a little bump so I was getting some sweet air. Then, a guy was out there setting up his camera and the ONE TIME I wiped out he took a few pictures of me on the ground and then left. Good times. The other day, I was at Best Buy the other day and I found Madden 06, NHL 06, NBA Live 06, Tiger Woods, and NASCAR all in a package deal for $20. In related news, if you listen carefully you can hear my GPA crashing for the semester. I don't feel like writing anymore so here's a picture of a cheeseburger.

THE STUFFER TRIBUNE

The Stouffer Tribune is a publication created by the residents of Stouffer College House that is delivered fresh to your door. Publication takes place five times a semester, and is printed up and delivered about once a month. Copies of old issues of the Tribune can also be found online (www.stouffer.house.upenn.edu/tribune.html) and in a box in my closet in 309 Mayer. This way, if you were to ever google yourself then you will find your name immortalized in the Tribune. If you want to write something, please send me an e-mail at tribune@pobox.upenn.edu. If you want to send love and/or hate mail, also send to tribune@pobox.upenn.edu. The comments within reflect those of the the individuals submitting and do not reflect those of Stouffer College House as a whole. The Stouffer Tribune currently has a circulation of about 350. Play me online? Well, you know that I'll beat you. If I ever meet you I'll ctrl-alt-delete you.

E-MAIL BOXES IN STUFFER REJOICE!

By: Everett Herman

Dear Stufferites,

As many of you have heard, my days here at Stouffer are numbered. When you come back from Spring Break, my cheerful (and sometimes covered with facial hair) face will no longer be in the House Office. You may be saying "Woo Hoo 300% less e-mails!" but hopefully many of you are saying "Why?!" Or if you're Erica Johnson, you're just not speaking to me. I figured a quick letter is due for the Tribune.

I recently was offered and accepted a position similar to Michele's at a residence hall down the street at the University of the Sciences. I moved in this weekend to my apartment at 42nd and Baltimore, so I'm literally just down the street. Unfortunately, Michele discovered my coup d'état plans to become House Dean at Stouffer, and Penn has this crazy idea that you need to be in grad school for longer than I'm willing to wait right now. In other words, this was a great opportunity for me that I couldn't pass up, despite the bad timing.

These past 4 years here at Stouffer have been tremendous for me, and mainly because of all of you! Even though I only lived here in Stouffer last year, you all have made me feel quite at home, which will make it very hard for me to leave. I hope all of you have a job some day that you care about as much as my job here!

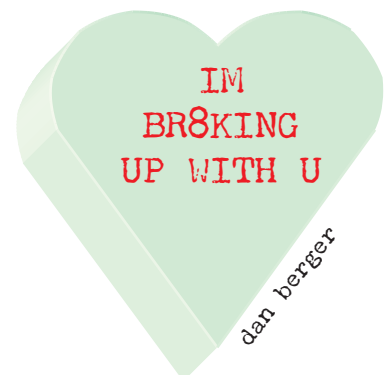

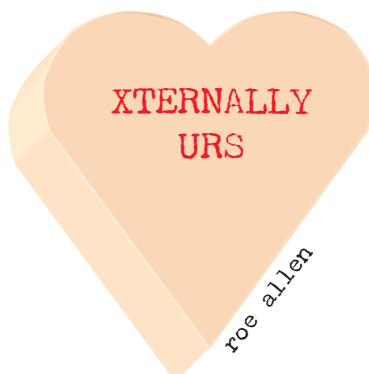

So again, thanks for all the memories, it has been quite a ride here at Stouffer. I will be at cookies on February 28th to say good bye before folks go on Spring Break. I will also be at the Stouffer Semi-Formal, as well. For all you Stouffer Seniors, I will also be at Bui's in my cap and gown bright and early before the procession.

Again thanks to all the staff, Phil & Amy, Sean, Beth, Litty, Keshav, Housman, Sklar, Alexandra, Amy G., Anim, Mollie, Sarah, Jen, The Ziemer, Dominique, Chris; all the managers Corey, Jerricka, Matt, Emily, James, Ryan, Drew, Evan (and yes, Ben); and all the past GAs and managers that are impossible to forget. I would especially like to thank one of the best bosses ever, Michele. I hope all of you learn as much from your first boss, as I have from Michele. At Michele's job interview I told her that "it would suck if you didn't get a job you interviewed for on your birthday!" Even from the beginning, I was wrong and Michele was right, because it would have been horrible for me, and Stouffer!

For everyone - feel free to keep in touch at everett@alumni.upenn.edu.

Best of luck to all of you!

- Ev

Financial (and Culinary) Advice Column

Question for the Advice Guru:

I had some troubles with my girlfriend after two and a quarter years of dating. I broke up with her originally, and it was full tilt downwards from there. We tried to work things out time and again, but never really built up a foundation, never really rebuilt what had been destroyed. Now, after so much time of this, I finally realized these things. Of course, it's the worst time possible... a boy at her college is interested in her, and I'm not quite sure who she'll choose. Do you think that I should wait for her, even if she decides to try out dating this other boy? Please let me know. Thanks in advance.

Advice Guru Pontificates:

This problem is common among investors new to fixed income. You've had all of your assets locked up in an especially high duration long term instrument, and in the current interest rate environment, it's really hurting you. Now is the perfect time to make your strategy more robust. Keep some of your money short for the immediate future, an especially wise move when interest rates are rising (as they are now). I recommend commercial paper or another vehicle designed to return your initial investment within a relatively short period. A proper rebalancing now will let you ensure that your portfolio will gain value over the coming fiscal year. Thanks for a great question.

And now for something completely related:

Dear Advice Guru:

I love to order New Delhi Chicken Tikka Masala, but when I get medium plus, its too mild, and when I order hot, its too hot! What should I do?

*Not eating food until I get a response,
Anonymous in 310 Mayer*

Dear Spice Wimp,

Medium Plus seems too mild because you've already had the Hot stuff. The solution is very obvious: blow the back of your head out with "Very Hot" and then "Hot" won't seem so bad. And remember: if it doesn't come with a warning label, you didn't get your money's worth (that applies to chainsaws too).
